EMERGENCY ACCOMMODATIONS

Emergency accommodations are provided by Accessibility Services on a case-by-case basis and for a period up to 14 business days without documentation, after which time it will go under re-evaluation. The nature of the emergency-related disability should be observable in nature (for example, a broken ankle) in order to receive accommodations without documentation. Examples of emergency accommodations might include the following:

- Classroom support such as readers and/or scribes
- Access to a classmate’s notes and/or audio recordings of lectures
- Adaptive furniture
- Alternative testing
- Access maps of campus
- Referrals to appropriate resources or agencies

Alternative Transportation

Unfortunately, Accessibility Services does not currently offer rides or any other form of alternative transportation to students at either the Hayward or Concord Campus. While we do have a wheelchair that students, faculty, staff and guests may use, it can only be done so on a very temporary basis.

We encourage students registered with us to plan a schedule which will limit the distance will need to walk from class to class, and to work with Accessibility Services so we can try to make classes scheduled as close together as possible (for instance, in the same building).

We also encourage students to utilize personal transportation solutions, such as having friends and/or family members assist you if you have classes far away from each other, but below is a list of other resources you can utilize as a student with disabilities.
