“Enthralling’ Atmosphere at Festival

Theatre, fun you got ya

Jolts of laughter from the audience during simple scene-changes made it appear that the commentary in their heads was extremely funny. Throughout the show there were lighting disasters, sound malfunctions, costume mix-ups and a general tongue-tangling from all corners. “Real” actors finished with a fast Q-and-A session, in which the directors dispensed all of the answers. This was the play’s attempt at making fun of present-day directors who are rumored to do the same for real show Q-and-As.

As for spending a week at Cal State Hayward, graduate student Maurice Spencer said he hoped choosing 10-minute plays, to be performed at the end of the week, was a winner was difficult for the judges. “I'm learning how to present my work and be more professional,” said Spencer. “The feedback from the judges is more informative because it is an open and interactive forum.”

Outside the competition doors in the University Union, reception desk said, “I usually bring a costume design, descriptive journey from Salt Lake City to the Bay area as an escape. “I'm presenting tomorrow and it's overwhelming,” he said. “The hardest part is you're going on out here.”

Said Graduating theater major Troy Cadwallader theorized, “You can tell a lot about a person's design by their presentation to experience everything the festival had to offer. “I'm presenting tomorrow and it's overwhelming,” he said. “The hardest part is you're going on out here.”
