Let’s Talk about Sex: Speaker hits CSUH with a few intimate questions.

By Jennifer Givens

Raymond Burton, 25, formerly a temporary support assistant in the Cal State Hayward Information and Computer Assistance Department, was arrested and charged withlicenses.

Mr. Burton had senior standing at CSUH and was working toward a degree in computer science.

Pamela Garcia-Fillioa noticed Mr. Burton’s body shortly after an hour in an alley on the south side of the library building, not far from the campus police station.

CSUH Health Center Asks Students for Feedback

By Joедy Solab

Many Cal State Hayward students have received the Health Assessment Survey 2001 questionnaire in the mail, but only a few have answered the call.

According to Pamela Garcia-Fillioa, assistant to the Student Health Center, 3000 students were randomly selected to participate in the survey, used to determine the health care needs of Cal State students, but only 700 have responded.

Because CSUH is a commuter school with a very diverse student body, health problems may be different than those of a typical college campus, she said.

Garcia-Fillioa and Dr. Catherine Coulman designed the survey by adapting a University of California survey to fit CSUH students.

A survey like this has never been done at Cal State Hayward and is one of the few that have been done in the CSU system.
