Opera Reaches Out to Younger Audiences

By Melissa Nixon

More than 300 opera enthusiasts filled the Segerstrom Concert Hall in Costa Mesa on Oct. 8 to watch the San Francisco Lyric Opera present a production of Georges Bizet’s “Carmen.”

According to theater officials, “Carmen,” and “The Glass Mender” at the same venue last year, are an attempt to introduce opera to the younger generation. “Carmen” continues its tradition of involvement with educational and outreach programs around the state throughout the year. The opera is in partnership with Orange County School of the Arts (OCSA) and the University of California, Irvine, which are among the world’s leading institutions of higher learning in the arts.

The opera features a wide range of activities to support the educational mission of the San Francisco Lyric Opera. Saturday at 8 p.m., the opera will offer a special educational program for younger audiences called “Carmen’s Kids.”

The San Francisco Lyric Opera is an educational leader that brings the music theater experience to a variety of students in Northern California. The San Francisco Lyric Opera is a nonprofit theater company based in San Francisco that presents performances of operas, musicals, and other musical theater works to the public. The San Francisco Lyric Opera is committed to creating an environment for artists and audiences that is open to all ages and backgrounds.

According to the San Francisco Lyric Opera, the opera is one of the most popular works in the repertoire of operas performed by opera companies around the world. The opera is based on the novella “Carmen” by French writer Prosper Merimée and is considered a masterpiece of French opera. The opera features a cast of renowned opera singers, including soprano, mezzo-soprano, and tenor. The opera’s music is composed by French composer Georges Bizet.

The opera features a variety of musical numbers, including the famous “Habanera” and “Dans la nuit,” which are widely recognized and enjoyed by opera lovers around the world. The opera is performed in French, with English supertitles.

The San Francisco Lyric Opera is known for its commitment to education and outreach, and it offers a variety of programs to support its mission of bringing the music theater experience to the public. The opera’s Young Audiences Program is a partnership with OCSA and the University of California, Irvine, which is among the world’s leading institutions of higher learning in the arts. The program brings the music theater experience to a variety of students in Northern California, and it features a wide range of activities designed to support the educational mission of the San Francisco Lyric Opera.

The opera is a leader in the field of educational theater, and it is committed to creating an environment for artists and audiences that is open to all ages and backgrounds. The opera is committed to supporting young artists and audiences, and it offers a variety of programs to support its mission of bringing the music theater experience to the public. The opera’s Young Audiences Program is a partnership with OCSA and the University of California, Irvine, which is among the world’s leading institutions of higher learning in the arts. The program brings the music theater experience to a variety of students in Northern California, and it features a wide range of activities designed to support the educational mission of the San Francisco Lyric Opera.