Dublin Schools Give Rousing Winter Concert

By Kyoko Iwaki

A student cast member said they had never forgotten performing with the young musicians standing. "I was so nervous before playing," said Mat Cottrell with a small gift to show appreciation, and the musicians played pieces of their performance in a salute to the band leader.

"The concert is what we were most worried about," said O’Neil. "I hope that I can find a way to go to the next games production."

"You must practice again and again," said Holthe to the children in the concert. "I appreciate your wonderful music."

"You must practice again and again," said Holthe to the children in the concert. "I appreciate your wonderful music.

"The concert is what we were most worried about," said O’Neil. "I hope that I can find a way to go to the next games production."

"You must practice again and again," said Holthe to the children in the concert. "I appreciate your wonderful music."