See the reveal of Charlotte’s Web live on stage. The pioneer, a young girl who narrated the story in Terrific style and excellent attention to detail. During a pre-recorded segment, the characters were dressed in overalls, jeans and T-shirts against the backdrop of a farmer's field. The stage design and costumes were designed precisely to accompany the classic story. The acting was superb, and the audience was thoroughly entertained. The actors were able to connect with the audience and make them laugh with their convincing and expressive performances. The story was told without an intermission as I think the breaks might have taxed the attention spans of the children. The entire night was very pleasant and amusing. As one mother said once the play was over, "It was very age appropriate. I couldn't agree more. The slide show did elicit laughter, but the best part of the night was hearing the laughter of the children in attendance."
