The selection of an outstanding professor at Cal State Hayward each year is made by a special subcommittee of the Faculty Affairs Committee. The successful candidate receives the George and Miriam Phillips Outstanding Professor Award of $1,000.

Faculty members interested in competing for the award, or members of the university community interested in recommending others, should notify the Office of the Academic Senate in writing by December 7, 2001.

Each nomination shall be supported by evidence of the nominee’s achievements as a teacher, as a member of his/her profession, and as a part of the campus community. Evidence may also include written statements, which are both descriptive and evaluative, by present and former students, colleagues in the nominees academic discipline, campus administrators, and others who are qualified to comment upon the nominees teaching and related contributions.

Candidates must submit supporting evidence to the office by January 18, 2002. Helpful evidence may include (a) a full curriculum vita, (b) documentation of teaching accomplishments, including student course evaluations, (c) documentation of professional achievement, (d) documentation of service to the campus and community, and (e) any other material deemed relevant in support of the nomination.
