

Pauline Brown, Professor Emerita of the Department of Teacher Education, Passed Away September 16, 2013.

Pauline Brown, Professor Emerita of the Department of Teacher Education, passed away at Stanford Hospital on September 16, 2013. She began his career at CSU, Hayward (East Bay) in 1966. She was awarded the Ed.D. in 1966 from Boston University. She retired in 1984.

Her obituary was published in the San Jose Mercury News/San Mateo County Times on Oct. 12, 2013:

*Pauline Brown
Resident of Palo Alto*

Pauline Brown, a resident of Channing House in Palo Alto, passed away at Stanford Hospital on Sept. 16, 2013, two weeks before her 94th birthday. A native Californian, she came to the Bay Area to attend Stanford from which she received both a B.A. and an M.A.

Pauline began her lifelong career in education as a primary grades teacher at Addison School in the Palo Alto Unified School District. She moved to Green Gables (now Duveneck) when it opened in 1951 and later taught at Cubberley High School. At this point she left Palo Alto to attend Boston University, from which received a doctorate in education. Returning to California she was a professor of elementary education at Cal State University in Hayward from which she retired in 1984.

In retirement Pauline's interest in art led her to the Canter Museum where she was an active member of the Committee for Art and served as a docent. She was also an avid reader, world traveler and bridge player. A private memorial gathering was held at Channing House. As she requested, Pauline was interred with her parents at the Santa Maria Cemetery in Santa Maria, California. Arrangements were under the direction of Dudley-Hoffman Mortuary, Crematory and Memory Gardens. (805) 922-8463.
