Self-Compassion

“Having compassion for oneself is really no different than having compassion for others. First, to have compassion for others you must notice that they are suffering. If you ignore that homeless person on the street, you can’t feel compassion for how difficult his or her experience is.

Second, compassion involves feeling moved by others’ suffering so that your heart responds to their pain (the word compassion literally means to “suffer with”). When this occurs, you feel warmth, caring, and the desire to help the suffering person in some way. Having compassion also means that you offer understanding and kindness to others when they fail or make mistakes, rather than judging them harshly.

Finally, when you feel compassion for another, it means that you realize that suffering, failure, and imperfection is part of the shared human experience. ‘There but for fortune go I.’”
- Dr. Kristen Neff, Self Compassion: The Proven Power of Being Kind to Yourself
How do you talk different to your friends than you talk to yourself?

How would it feel to show yourself the same compassion that you show to your loved ones?
Using Self-Compassion to Change Negative Self-Talk

1. Think about the ways that you use self-criticism as a motivator. Do you criticize yourself because you think being hard on yourself will help you change? If so, first try to get in touch with the emotional pain that your self-criticism causes, giving yourself compassion for the experience of feeling so judged.

2. Next, see if you can think of a kinder, more caring way to motivate yourself to make a change. What language would a wise and nurturing friend, parent, teacher, or mentor use to gently point out how your behavior is unproductive, while simultaneously encouraging you to do something different? What is the most supportive message you can think of that’s in line with your underlying wish to be healthy and happy?

3. Continually notice your harsh self-talk and shift it. Remember that if you really want to motivate yourself, love is more powerful than fear.
Components of Self-Compassion

1. Mindfulness: This is a moment of suffering
   • Ouch. This hurts
   • This is stress.

2. Common humanity: Suffering is a part of life
   • Other people feel this way.
   • I’m not alone.
   • We all struggle in our lives.

Now, put your hands over your heart, feel the warmth of your hands and the gentle touch of your hands on your chest. Or adopt the soothing touch you discovered felt right for you.

3. Kindness: May I be kind to myself
You can also ask yourself, “What do I need to hear right now to express kindness to myself?” Come up with a phrase that speaks to you in your particular situation.
Self-Affirmations

Affirmations can focus on several categories, including character traits, physical attributes, and skills and/or accomplishments.

1. Start your affirmations with “I am” (e.g., “I am a good friend”)
2. Keep them short (we don’t need a novel)
3. Keep them positive (avoid saying “not”)
4. Use feeling words when you can (e.g., “I am proud of myself”)
5. Keep them focused on you (after all, they are self-affirmations!)

Examples: “I am proud that I am hard-working” or “I am thankful for my strong legs”
Help with Self-Affirmations

Feeling stuck? Ask yourself questions like these:

- When was a time that you felt proud of yourself and why?
- Have you ever forgiven someone who has hurt you?
- Have you ever received a compliment that you agree with?
- What would your best friend or a loved one say about you?

Feeling Guilty? Consider this:

- We are socialized to ignore or minimize our positive characteristics.
- Unfortunately, we then just dwell on our “negatives.”
- Practicing self-affirmations helps bring balance and improve mood.
