

Getting an ADHD Assessment and Referrals

The SHCS does not do ADHD assessments or diagnosis ADHD.

- If you have health insurance, first call them and ask if they cover or recommend someone locally who does ADHD assessments. This may be your most affordable option. ADHD assessments can cost up to $1500 per session without insurance.
- If not, ask your insurance how much they can reimburse you if you see an ADHD assessor outside your insurance network.
- If you have a primary care physician outside of SHCS, ask them for an ADHD assessment referral or list of covered providers.

Below are some local organizations that provide ADHD assessments. Please note that the CSUEB SHCS is not affiliated with any of these organizations and does not promote or endorse their services. This is not an exhaustive list, it's just to get you started.

Please contact each organization on your own and confirm:

- Their information is still accurate
- What your total out of pocket cost will be
- Their testing report meets SHCS requirements for ADHD treatment

Please note that completing an ADHD assessment does not guarantee you will be prescribed stimulant medications through SHCS.
