SLHS Grading Guidelines and Recommendations

The grading pattern for all classes for Spring 2021 has been set to A/B/C/NC. Unlike in Spring or Fall 2020, both graduate and undergraduate students must take major courses, including electives, using this grading pattern unless given explicit permission from the major advisor to change to CR/NC grading due to significant extenuating circumstances (such as, but not limited to, documented family or personal medical or housing emergencies). To receive permission, submit a department petition to your faculty advisor for review and consideration; the form is at: https://www.csueastbay.edu/slhs/files/docs/petition-form.pdf Because the deadline to make any changes to grading patterns is April 16th, please submit this form by April 12th.

See below for university information related to Spring 2021 grading:

Undergraduates: You can find University grading FAQs and deadlines for undergraduates here: https://www.csueastbay.edu/aps/spring-2021/undergraduate-faq.html

Graduate students:
You can find University grading FAQs and deadlines for graduate students here: https://www.csueastbay.edu/aps/spring-2021/graduate-faq.html

- If you are a CC1 graduate student taking 400-level courses, please note that the undergraduate credit cut-off applies to 400-level courses. (i.e., a C+/C/C- grade does NOT count for credit on a graduate course, but it DOES count for credit in an undergraduate course). You can find the undergraduate cut-off guidelines here: https://www.csueastbay.edu/aps/spring-2021/undergraduate-faq.html

Note: ASHA does not set grading requirements for programs ("Neither ASHA certification nor accreditation standards set grading requirements. This includes pass/fail or satisfactory/unsatisfactory options. Grading is up to the discretion of the program and must be in accordance with university policies and procedures." https://www.asha.org/Certification/COVID-19-Guidance-From-CFCC/) (updated 2/3/2021)